Pretty Missionary Reprimanded for

Smiling in Court,

For the first time in her long career as a missionary among the wayward women of Chinatown Mrs. Louise Bender was to-day in a police court, not as prisoner, but complainant. She was insuited last night in Pell street while bent on an errand of mercy; attacked by a man who threw her down in a hallway and attempted to assault ner. Night after night Mrs. Bender has travelled through Pell, Doyers and Mott streets. She knows every face in that section, and has been in nearly every Chinese, Japanese and rough characters of all kinds infest the place, but a missionary woman, whether young or old, is always treated with the utmost respect. It remained for a Japanese to nommit the outrage.

Now that she has been insulted in so grievous a manner, Mrs. Hender has grown quite nervous. She is afraid to face her husband, because he has always objected to her work in China-town. He does not consider it a fit occupation for women, but in spite of his protests, she continued a worker in the airs, hender gained considerable noto-riety some time ago on account of a difference with Rebecca Fream. The latter had a woman arrested, and the Rescue Hand rose up against her for having done so. She is known as a hard worker.

It was fully five minutes before she realized what had happened. Fifteen minutes later Policeman Haas, on whose post the accident occurred, arrived on the scene. He smelled the odor of brandy, and without further investigation pronounced the woman drunk and telephoned to the West Forty-seventh street station for a patrol wagon.

It never occurred to him, apparently, that the woman might be dangerousiy injured. Whether it did or not he utterly disregarded the woman's distressing condition and kept her on the side, walk to be ogled by a curious crowd of men and boys for nearly half an hour. Then an ambulance arrived, and although not having witnessed the accident, the policeman told the surgeon all about how it occurred and said he thought the woman was drunk.

The surgeon, it is said, accepted the thought the woman was drunk.
